

12/24/70

Dear Moo,

If the envelope suggests a Christmas card, then it accomplishes that for which we have no time. Best to you all.

The immediate purpose of this hasty note is to make the outgoing mail before holiday closedown, so that you may have this when you get to work Monday.

I have just gotten about a half-pound of formerly-suppressed Ferrie materials. I have not had time to read them. I have skimmed. It seems that O'Sullivan recruited Oswald for the CAP and one of your unfriendly news directors knew that Ferrie knew Oswald.

We have the problems with which you are familiar, so even copying these can be a burden and a cost for me. I therefore write to inquire into your interest- whether, in fact, it still exists.

You will recall you promised me certain things then fell silent.

I have had to read this to mean that you couldn't care less.

So, tell me if I'm wrong.

It seems like maybe it is worthwhile to file suits and prepare for and let it be known that there's more to come!

I think examination of what I have just gotten will disclose that withholding was at best for spurious reasons, probably not frivolous but raw suppression - and in just the right area. There is a long interview with Ferrie included.

I plan to write the editor of the States-Otem about the editorial in the paper I got yesterday. If I can get around to it, I'll send it to you and ask that you then give it to Alcock.

Have a good year.

Hastily,

Harold Weisberg
